OBLIGATION "You must; I must" (cont)

Written Conversation

もう帰らなきゃだめだ。 I need to go home. (If you add だめ, it sounds like you are more desperate)

【病院】びょういんに【行かな】いかないといけないよ。
[You] have to go to the hospital.

漢かん字じをもっと練習】れんしゅうしなきゃだめ(だ/です)。
[I] must practice kanji more.

!□!□Note: なければ actually sounds really formal and is rarely used in conversation. By replacing なければ with なきゃ, you can make your speech more suitable for conversation. In this context, だめだ or いけない should be used.

なくちゃ is short for なくては. ては is another way of saying "if" but not used often. You can see ては with いけません which means, not allowed to do something.

V-てしまう Regret / Completion

V-てしまう / ちゃう "I unfortunately; I completely"

MEANINGS:

1. Expresses regret/guilt because you admit that you did something bad.
2. "To get it over and done with". To get things done all at once so that it won't bother you anymore. Often used when you made up your mind to do something "Okay, let's get it done". Usually used in volitional form しましょ / しまおう. か particle is also used when you make up your mind to do something.
3. "To finish (food/drink) something so it won't bother you anymore". used in volitional or request form.
4. "If you don't do it then something bad might happen" Nuance: If this thing had happened, then you can't do anything about it. You cannot take it back, undo it. You can also use the past tense V-てしまった to say that "something bad had happened" (and you cannot do anything about it).

□□□□Caution:

-Usually is not used in the past tense to say V-てしまった "got things done". Although this is correct grammar, it may sound like doing something to get things done is something bad. Because this grammar has another function which means "to regret doing something".

Expresses regret/guilt for your own action

To get things done all at once

To finish (food/drink) all at once

To say something bad might happen

先生、すいません、遅れて-
しまいました。

よし、部屋をよし、【片付けて】かた

Verb Nominalization

MAKE NOUN-BASED SUBORDINATE CLAUSES

-Noun based subordinate clauses describe nouns within a sentence and allow you to make and sophisticated Japanese sentences

-Subordinate Clauses have a subject and verb that don't convey a complete idea.

-They often signals the words: that, which, who, where, when clauses

-Noun based subordinate clauses are made simply by putting the plain form of the verb before the noun

-The subject of the subordinate clause uses the subject particle が

Ex. "The car THAT I will buy"

(私が)買う車 = 私が can be omitted as it is already implied that you are talking about YOUR car

「買う車」 is a subordinate clause describing 車

Examples:

買った車 = The car (that) I bought

買わない車 = The car I won't buy

買わなかった車 = The car that I did not buy

買ってもいい車 = The car that you may buy

(買ってもいい describes 車)

Subordinate clause: 買う車

買った車はよくないです。

買った車を妹にやります。

Verb Nominalization (cont)

彼が君に【渡す】 = The money he handed over to you
わたしたちのお金

(Note that the particle を is used as 買った車 is the direct object of the sentence which is a noun that receives the action of the verb)

When the subjects of the main and subordinate clause are different, the subject of the subordinate clause takes が and the subject of the main clause typically takes は

SAME SUBJECT	DIFFERENT SUBJECTS (main and subordinate clauses)	2 SUBORDINATE CLAUSES IN 1 SENTENCE	SUBORDINATE CLAUSE AS THE DIRECT OBJECT
--------------	---	-------------------------------------	---

-Subject in the subordinate clause can be omitted	-Note that you have to mention both the subjects of the main and subordinate clauses if it happens that the sentence has 2 different subjects.

【銀座】ギンザで買った酒を飲む。 I will drink sake that I bought at the Ginza.	食べた料理は寿司でした。 The dish that I ate was sushi.	食べた料理は田中さんが寿司でした。 The dish that I ate was sushi that Mr Tanaka made.	買った車を妹にやります。 I will give the car that I bought to my sister.

弟は私が買った車を運転します。

My younger brother will drive the car that I bought.

仕事で疲れた私は【銀座】ギンザで買った酒を飲む。

(We add 私が as the subject of the subordinate clause is different from the subject of the main clause which is 弟は)

I who am tired from work will drink sake that I bought from Ginza.

仕事で疲れた = describes 私

【銀座】ギンザで買った = describes 酒

The way of doing~"方 vs の仕方 vs 方法

Usages:

-Adding 方 to the masu-stem of a verb to mean 'way of doing verb' e.g. 食べ方 (way of eating)

-する verbs are irregular. The correct way to write it would be 勉強の仕方. So, quite simply, 仕方 is used with する verbs.

-You could replace 仕方 with 方法 to get 勉強の方法 but this is just the formality difference

-仕方 also appears in set phrases like 仕方がない ("it can't be helped").

Comparison:

方

1. If you read it as "hou" means direction; toward to somewhere.

方法

This is used only for "how to use/ the way to do it"

□□DONTs:

-This cannot be used when talking about someone's wants. You cannot presume what someone is thinking.

-Don't use this to make invitations as it would sound too direct, blunt and impolite as if the person is dying to do the action. Use V-ませんか instead for invitations.

WHEN REFERRING TO WHAT OTHER PEOPLE WANT/DO NOT WANT (TO DO)

1. V-たがる "It seems like (A) wants (to do verb)..."

-When using たがる、 we can no longer use the particle が to mark the direct object but have to use を because it is now a full verb and no longer an adjective.

2. V-たいと思います "I think A wants to do..."

を/が particles can be used to mark the direct object particle as V-たい is both a verb and an adjective

3. V-たいと言っていました "(A) said that he/she wants to do..."

4. Other modalities: そうだ、野田、らしい、みたい

V-ますたい "Want (to do verb)"

V-ますたくない "Don't want
(to do verb)"

V-たがる "It seems like (A) wants (to do

	-When you want something like an object, idea or something you can't control (weather) and you want that thing to change, ××DONTs: V-てもらいたい is NEVER used for this grammar		-Not as direct; used when you are asking for a favor -てほしい sounds more like entitled than てもらいたい	-Expressing what you don't want
			-It's natural to use んですが / んですけど when making a request / asking somebody a favor

-Expresses strong intention of doing something	-Expresses schedule (time, place, accommodation, itinerary) or plan	-To express intent at the spur of the moment. The decision is on you. つもり is much stronger than this grammar and is used by kids often.
-つもり is what you are thinking; not a solid plan and there's a possibility that it can be changed.	-Used when you have solid plans, meetings, appointments and schedules. Not used with intention	✖✖Cannot use with a negative sentence since this is something that you plan on doing so negative does not work.
