

Management Definitions

Dalton E. McFarland: The process of creating, directing, and maintaining organizations through coordinated human effort.

Harold Koontz: The art of getting things done through others in a formal group environment.

George R. Terry: Process of achieving objectives using human and other resources.

Henry Fayol: Functions: planning, organizing, commanding, coordinating, and controlling.

Peter Drucker: A key social institution that makes resources productive.

Lawrence Appley: Getting things done through others.

Meaning of Management:

- It involves effective use of resources to achieve goals.
- It exists in all areas of life.
- It is a distinct, dynamic process made up of interrelated activities.
- It improves efficiency, coordination, and order in human efforts.

Functions of Management

Five core functions of management:

- Planning: Deciding what, when, and how tasks will be done in advance.
- Organising: Identifying activities, creating departments, and establishing authority and responsibility relationships.
- Staffing: Managing human resources through recruitment, selection, training, development, and performance appraisal.
- Leading: Directing and motivating employees through communication, supervision, and leadership to achieve common goals.
- Controlling: Setting performance standards, comparing actual results with them, and taking corrective actions when needed.

Planning

Planning is a key function of management that involves analyzing present conditions and deciding how to achieve a desired future state. It is both an organizational necessity and a managerial responsibility, focused on setting goals and preparing for future changes.

Dalton McFarland: Planning aims to set appropriate goals and prepare for adaptive and innovative change.

Harold Koontz and Cyril O'Donnell: Planning is an intellectual process involving conscious decision-making based on facts and estimates.

George R. Terry: Planning is the foundation of successful actions in organizations.

Theo Haimann: Planning involves deciding in advance what to do, including objectives, policies, programs, and procedures.

Characteristics of Planning:

- Primary function: First step in management.
- Goal-oriented: Focuses on achieving objectives.
- Intellectual: Based on thinking and facts.
- Pervasive: Applies at all levels.
- Continuous: Ongoing process.
- Choice-based: Selects best alternative.
- Group-focused: Aims at organizational goals.
- Flexible: Can adapt to changes.

