Conjugation (verbs / teгusõna)

Person	I conj	II conj
	others	и
Я ('I')	у/ю	у/ю
Ты ('You')	ешь	ишь
Он/она/оно ('Him/-Her/It')	ет	ит
Мы ('We')	ем	им
Вы ('You')	ете	ите
Они ('Them')	ут/ют	ат/ят

"to ..." is the infinitive of a verb, and keeps the -ть, while "I am ..." requires conjugation

Conjugation exceptions

I conj	II conj
		держать ('to keep')
брить ('to shave')	видеть ('to see')	вертеть ('to twirl')

стелить ('to lay')	обидеть ('to offend')	зависеть ('to depend') ненавидеть ('to hate')	терпеть ('to tolerate')
	смотреть ('to watch')	слышать ('to hear')
дышать ('to breathe')	гнать ('to drive')

Past

Gender	Ending
Male	л
Female	ла
Neutral	ло
Plural	ли

Gender is determined by the subject (/ was speaking, She was eating)

Pronouns

I	Я	Me	Меня
You	Ты	You (informal)	Тебя
He, It (m)	Он	Him, It (m,n)	Его
She, It (f)	Она	Her, It (f)	Её
It	Оно
We	Мы	Us	Нас
You (formal/plural)	Вы	You (formal/plural)	Вас
They	Они	Them	Их

Вы is used as the formal singular "you", and the plural "you" (slang: "yous" or "you all") when talking to more than one person.

Nominative case (nimetav)

Gender	Nouns	Adjectives	Possesives
Male	const. , й	ый ий ой	Мой Твой Наш Ваш
Female	а о г я	ая яя	Моя Твоя Наша Ваша
Neutral	о о г е	ое ее	Моё Твоё Наше Ваше
Plural	+ы; й а я > ы; ь > и; о > а; е > я;	ый ой > ые; ий > ие	Мои Твои Наши Ваши

Именительный паде́ж

The nominative case is the default case of a word, as found in dictionaries and when no other case is specifically used. It is also used for the subject of a sentence: in "Bob eats lunch", Bob is the subject of the sentence, so would be in its default nominative form.

Genitive case (omastav)

Gender	Nouns	Adjectives	Possesives
Male/Neutral	const. , о > а;	ого его	Моего Твоего Нашего Вашего
Female	й, е, ь > я а > ы ь, я > и	ой ей	Моей Твоей Нашей Вашей

Genitive case (omastav) (cont)

Plural	ов, ев, ей	ых, их	Моих Твоих Наших Ваших
--------	------------	--------	---------------------------

Родительный падеж

- Counting - When counting objects ("I have six sheep"), the thing being enumerated is usually put in the genitive case.

- Possession - If something is owned by something else, the owner is in the genitive case.

- Negation - To say something is there, we generally use the nominative case. If it isn't there, we use нет followed by the genitive.

- Prepositions - Locations (in/on/near/etc); Also used for "I have"

Dative case

Gender	Nouns	Adjectives	Possessives
Male/Neutral	const. , о > у	ому ему	Моему Твоему Нашему Вашему
Female	а > е я, ь > и	ой ей	Моей Твоей Нашей Вашей
Plural	const. , о, а > ам й, е, я > ям	ым им	Моим Твоим Нашим Вашим

Дательный падеж

The dative case is used to denote indirect objects, which are objects that indicate "to whom", or "to what" an action is done. So in the sentence, "I am writing a letter to you", "(a) letter" is the direct object of the verb, while "(to) you" is the indirect object.

Accusative case

Gender	Nouns	Adjectives	Possessives
M obj	As	As nom.	As nom.
M alive	As gen.	As gen.	As gen.
Female	а > у я > ю	ая > ую яя > юю	Мою Твою Нашу Вашу
Neutral	As nom.	As nom.	As nom.
Pl obj	As nom.	As nom.	As nom.
Pl alive	As gen.	As gen.	As gen.

Винительный падеж

The accusative case is used for the direct object of a verb. In "Bob eats lunch", "lunch" is the direct object.

NB! Masculine nouns denoting people or animals (i.e., animate nouns) take their genitive form, while neuter nouns and inanimate masculine nouns take their nominative form. Plural nouns of any gender take their nominative plural form if inanimate, or their genitive plural form if animate.

Instrumental case

Gender	Nouns	Adjectives	Possessives
Male/Neutral	ом ем	ым им	Моим Твоим Нашим Вашим
Female	ой ей ёй	ой ей	Моей Твоей Нашей Вашей

Plural	const. , о, а > ами й, е, я > ями	ыми ими Вашими	Моими Твоими Нашими Вашими
--------	--	----------------------	----------------------------------

Творительный падеж

под ('under') над ('above/'on top of') за ('behind') между ('between'), and перед ('before/'in front of').

The instrumental case is used to denote the object by which something is done.

Prepositional case (kohakääne)

Gender	Nouns	Adjectives	Possessives
Male / Neutral	е	ом ем	Моём Твоём Нашем Вашем
Female	а, я > е ь > и	ой ей	Моей Твоей Нашей Вашей
Plural	const. , о, а > ах й, е, я > ях	ых их	Моих Твоих Наших Ваших

Предложный падеж

в (in), на (on), and о/обо (about; it's обо in the phrase "about me" or "about my").

Commonly used to denote a sentence's object's location or an activity. However, these prepositions can also call other cases, in which case their meaning changes. For instance, в + prep means 'in', as in, "I live in England". в + acc, however, means 'into' or 'to', as in, "I'm flying to New York".
