Parts of Speech

Noun	names a person, place, thing, idea (Lulu, jail, cantaloupe, loyalty, and so on)
Pronoun	takes the place of a noun (he, who, I, what, and so on). They may be used only as subjects or subject complements: I, he, she, we, they, who, whoever. They may be used only as objects or objective complements: me, him, her, us, them, whom, whomever. May be used as either subjects or objects: you, it, everyone, anyone, no one, someone, mine, ours, yours, theirs, either, neither, each, everybody, anybody, nobody, somebody, everything, anything, nothing, something, any, none, some, which, what, that. Pronouns that show possession: my, mine, your, yours, his, her, hers, its, our, ours, their, theirs, whose.
Verb	expresses action or being (scrambled, was, should win, and so on)
Adjective	describes a noun or pronoun (messy, strange, alien, and so on)
Adverb	describes a verb, adjective, or other adverb (willingly, woefully, very, and so on)
Preposition	relates a noun or a pronoun to another word in the sentence (by, for, from, and so on)
Conjunction	ties two words or groups of words together (and, after, although, and so on)
Interjection	expresses strong emotion (yikes! wow! ouch! and so on)

Verb Tense Tips in English Grammar

Simple present tense	tells what is happening now
Simple past tense	tells what happened before now
Simple future	talks about what has not happened yet
Present perfect tense	expresses an action or state of being in the present that has some connection with the past
Past perfect tense	places an event before another event in the past
Future perfect tense	talks about something that has not happened yet in relation to another event in the future

Placing Proper Punctuation

. ? !	Endmarks	All sentences need an endmark: a period, question mark, exclamation point, or ellipsis. Never put two endmarks at the end of the same sentence.
'	Apostrophes	For singular ownership, generally add 's; for plural ownership, generally add s'.
,	Commas	In direct address, use commas to separate the name from the rest of the sentence. In lists, place commas between items in a list, but not before the first item. Before conjunctions, when combining two complete sentences with a conjunction, place a comma before the conjunction. If you have one subject and two verbs, don't put a comma before the conjunction.
()	Hyphens	If two words create a single description, put a hyphen between them if the description comes before the word that it's describing. Don't hyphenate two-word descriptions if the first word ends in -ly.
:	Colon	Use a colon after an independent clause that precedes a list and to separate an explanation, rule, or example from a preceding independent clause.
;	Semicolon	Use a semicolon to join independent clauses in compound sentences that do not have coordinating conjunctions (and, or, but, nor, for, so, yet) and commas as connectors. Words like however, moreover, thus, and therefore, are often used as connectors in these sentences. You can also use semicolons to separate long or complicated items in a series that already includes commas, and to separate two long or complex independent clauses joined by a coordinating conjunction if confusion would result from using a comma.
