

Introduction

A half marathon is a pretty impressive challenge to take on as a runner but is definitely something that is achievable for most people. This cheat sheet has been made to help you get started running with the goal in mind to complete or race your first half marathon. If you are completely new to running, you might want to look at our 5km run training plan which runs for 8 weeks, and then progress to this training plan: <https://cheatography.com/vinces/cheat-sheets/beginners-5km-running-training-plan/>.

Running Effort Scale 1 -10

- 10 - Maximum effort
- 9 - Very hard intensity
- 8 - Hard intensity
- 7 - Requires constant effort
- 6 - Challenging but can sustain for 30 to 60 minutes
- 5 - Still requires effort
- 4 - Slight effort to maintain pace
- 3 - Able to maintain a conversation
- 2 - Gentle and easy to maintain
- 1 - Very easy pace

Effort Required For Running

For all the runs, you should be maintaining an effort between 2 and 3. This means they are easy runs and you are limiting the chance of injuring yourself and still enjoying the process. The only exception is where you see "Strides" listed in the plan. These are 30 second bouts of higher intensity running, where you should be running at approximately 8 on the effort scale.

About "Strides"

"Strides" listed in the plan in some of your training days. These are 30 second bouts of higher intensity running, where you should be running at approximately 8 on the effort scale.

Summary

Remember consistency is the key to training for and completing your first half marathon. It's important to make sure you keep up with the plan, especially the long runs scheduled for each week. Try your best to limit the speed and try to pace appropriately to allow yourself to keep running for as long as possible. Good luck and remember to stay safe and have fun.
